State Board Of Health Adopts Regulations

State Board of Health, Jackson, Mississippi.

More than a year ago, on March 8th, 1918, the Executive Committee of the State Board of Health passed formal Regulations Governing the Control of Venereal Diseases in this State. These regulations have since been amended, so that now the legislation required for the control of these diseases in this State is sufficient for all purposes, and a lack of authority can no longer be offered as an excuse for any laxity in the protection of the public health from the inroads of these diseases.

In the first place, the power of the State Board of Health to make rules for the safeguarding of the public health is unassailable for, according to Section 2489 of the Mississippi Code of 1906, in the chapter on "Health and Quarantine."

"The State Board of Health is authorized to make and publish all reasonable rules and regulations necessary to enable it to discharge its duties and powers, and to carry out the purposes and objects of its creation, and reasonable sanitary rules and regulations, to be enforced in the several counties by the County Health Officer, under the supervision and control of the State Board of Health."

And Section 2511 of the same Code, declares that violations of any rule or regulation of the State Board of Health constitute a misdemeanor, and are punishable by fine or imprisonment or both.

The Board of Health Regulations governing the control of these diseases are adequate for the needs of the work. As stated in previous articles of this series, physicians and druggists or vendors of patent remedies for the treatment of venereal diseases are required to report to the State Board of Health patients and purchasers of these remedies, and the responsibility of the reporting of these cases is fixed upon physician and druggist respectively.

The regulations also fix upon the parents or guardians the responsibility for the compliance of infected minors with the regulations.

One of the most important features of the regulations is the making of any venereal disease quarantizable. This power is frequently necessary when infected persons deliberately expose innocent or careless persons to infection. The homes of prostitutes can be placarded, and quarantine in situated thereon, just as in a case of smallpox or meningitis.

The lay public is further protection by a section of the regulations stating that infected persons shall not be permitted to engage in any occupation the nature of which is such that their infection is likely to be borne to others.

It is common knowledge to those in touch with conditions that prostitutes and those who habitually patronize them are, in a majority of cases, infected. Furthermore, such persons, in the past, have often been haled into police court, found guilty of disorderly conduct, fined, and given their liberty. If they were infected, the fine did not protect a single subsequent patron; indeed, the fine made an additional number of patrons (and victims) imperative! It is now required by the regulations that all persons, male and female, brought to trial on a charge of immorality must be examined by a representative of the State Board of Health before they are released from custody. And, if found to be infected, they must be treated until no longer in an infective stage. The regulations also prescribe the medical standards for release from treatment.

The infected person, if not under sentence of the court, may have the choice of taking voluntary treatment or being interned or imprisoned and forcibly treated until cured.

The time has come when the wholesome and right-thinking citizen of this State must take a firm stand against the continued spread of these diseases. It is not necessarily a sign of weakness to permit an unfortunate, but reasonable, victim to protect his reputation so far as possible, so long as a cure is ultimately effected; but, it is decidedly wrong, and most assuredly an evidence of weakness for officials in whose care the public health rests to permit persons who do not realize or refuse to acknowledge their responsibility to the public, and will not voluntarily submit to treatment, to continue to remain at large and add to the number of their victims. These persons are the ruthless submersives who lie in wait for the innocent persons—not of your family, but possibly of your neighbors' families, or of your servants' families, in whose care you place your children—and frequently attack them unawares, thru innocent contact. And not until the citizens of Mississippi realize this will the State Board of Health make much progress toward the control of these diseases, for advancement in this field depends upon the cooperation of public officials.

"UNCLE SAM" AND THE HOME GARDEN

Well Known Civic Leader Shows How a Vegetable Garden Will Cut The Family Store Bill In Half

Atlanta, Ga.—(Special).—"Few people realize the actual money-saving power of the home vegetable garden and what it can be made to contribute in the way of food for the family table," says President H. G. Hastings, of the Georgia State Chamber of Commerce, and the Southeastern Fair, in discussing the matter of food supply for the South in 1919.

"Uncle Sam, through the United States Department of Agriculture," said Mr. Hastings, "estimated the value of the vegetables produced last year in home gardens of the United States at three hundred and fifty million of dollars. This means that much actually saved by the garden makers from their store bills."

"Whenever there is lack of food or money to buy food, no matter whether it be due to world-wide food scarcity, boll weevil damage or other cause, the first word 'Uncle Sam' passes out to the sufferer is to make a good home garden. Why? Because the right kind of a home garden is the quickest, cheapest and best source of food supply there is."

"The great trouble here in the South is that our people don't take the home garden seriously enough, or give it the attention that its importance as a food producer and money-saver justifies. It is mostly made with a flick and a promise and the cultivation and replanting it gets during the growing season is mostly of the unfulfilled promise kind."

"With the present and certain to be continued high food prices on the one hand, and the very great uncertainty as to the price that cotton or other cash crops will sell for next fall, it is a time above all others to play safe."

"This is no time to gamble on cotton. None of us can tell within 15 cents a pound what it will sell for next fall. The farmer who makes few or no store debts for food, producing his own and family needs on home acres, is safe regardless of cotton prices, and he is the only one who is safe."

"The right kind of a home garden maintained all through the season and given a square deal in the way of cultivation, is the greatest store-bill-cutter on record. A quarter to half an acre garden for the average family will cut the store bill in half."

"First Away—The Hudson!"

Note How the Super-Six Leads on Every Road—In Get-a-Way—As a Traveler and In Numbers

In city traffic, the driver of a motor feels the fullest amount of satisfaction or chagrin in the acceleration of the car he handles.

It is easily the most important quality in a car to the man who drives primarily to save time. Many cars, which have plenty of speed once they have gained momentum, are always far behind in city travel, because their sluggish acceleration loses so much time in the numerous stops and starts. Such cars are an exasperation.

Where Supremacy Is Shown

The Hudson Super-Six holds the acceleration records. But it is not on the test course that its supreme mastery of pick-up is best proved. It is at thousands of city crossings, controlled by the traffic policeman's arm and whistle. At any of these crossings watch the Hudson flash away in the lead when the barrier goes up. Mark, then, how swiftly it opens the gap between itself and following cars. So well is Hudson leadership of acceleration recognized that the drivers of other types usually concede the Super-Six right of way.

But acceleration is only one item among the qualities that make all Hudson owners enthusiasts. Its great reserve of power that springs instantly at a touch to do any bidding, its endurance and dependability are all sources of pride and constant satisfaction to the hosts who drive Hudsons.

60,000 Prove All Alike

The Hudson holds more worth while records than any other stock car has ever shown. Sixty thousand owners are daily demonstrating in practical, every day use, the great qualities revealed in the establishing of those records.

There is a shortage of Hudsons this year—greater in proportion to output even than that of last year, and of the two years before, when the Super-Six was first issued, and when thousands vainly tried to secure them. If you are intending to buy a Hudson Super-Six this year you would do well to speak now.
